DETAILED ACTIONDouble Patenting

1. The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the "right to exclude" granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. See In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686 F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent is shown to be commonly owned with this application. See 37 CFR 1.130(b).

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer. A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

2. Claims 20-43 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 1-12 of U.S. Patent No. 5,909,205. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because they are claiming similar subject matter as illustrated in the following:

Claim 1 of the US Patent No. 5,909,205)	Claim 30 of the instant application
A liquid crystal display device for accepting input display data, enlarging or reducing said input display data, and outputting display data to a liquid crystal panel with driver circuits, wherein,	A computer system which enlarges an image represented by image signals to be displayed, comprising:
A horizontal synchronous signal of said output display data is synchronized with a horizontal synchronous signal of said input display data at periodic time intervals in accordance with an enlargement/reduction rate, and	a computer main unit which outputs said image signals and horizontal synchronizing signals; a memory which is arranged to store said image signals; a display panel which displays said image represented by said image signals;
When said input display data is enlarged by 3/2, the horizontal synchronous signal of said output display data is synchronized with the horizontal synchronous signal of said input	a processing circuit which enlarges the vertical direction of said image represented by said image signals by a non-integer number of times in accordance with a resolution of said display data, every time the horizontal synchronous signal of said input display data is generated twice.	display panel divided by a resolution of said image represented by said image signals outputted from said computer main unit; and a control circuit which outputs said image signals from said memory in accordance with an output timing synchronized with an input timing when said image signals are inputted into said memory, Wherein said control unit synchronizes said output timing with said input timing at designated intervals in accordance with a resolution of said display panel divided by a resolution of said image signals outputted from said computer unit, and said output timing is generated at certain intervals.

From the comparison above, it is noted that claim 30 does not specify that the display is a liquid crystal display device, However, it is obvious to apply an enlarge image signal for different kinds of the displays. It is also noted claim 30 includes a memory for storing image signals. It would have been obvious to have included a memory for storing the input image signals so that the image signals can be modified (e.g. enlargement of the image signals).
